The Song.

THE SONG OF THE MYSTIC.

BY PATREE BYAN. walked down the Valley of Silence, Around me, but God's and my own; And the hush of my heart was as holy As hovers where angels have flown.

Long ago was I weary of voices Whose music my soul could not win;
Long ago was I weary of noises
That fretted my soul with their din;
Long ago was I weary of places
Where I met but the human and sin.

I walked in the world with the worldly, Yet I craved what the world never gave; And I said, in the world each ideal That shince like a star on life's wave Is toned on the shores of the real, And sleeps like a dream in the grave

Do you ask how I live in the Valley ? I weep, and I droam, and I pray;
But my tears are as sweet as the dewdrops
That fall on the roses in May;
And my prayer, like perfume from the cea
Ascendeth to food night and day.

In the hush of the Valley of Silence
I hear all the songs that I sing;
And the music floats down the dim Valley
Till each finds a word for a wing,
That to men like the doves of the deluge

The message of peace they may bring. But far on the deep there are billows.
That never shall break on the beach. And I have heard songs in the silence That never shall float into speech. And I have had dreams in the Valley

Too lofty for language to reach And I have seen thoughts in the Valley-Ah, me! how my spirit was stirred!— They wear holy veils on their faces; Their footsteps can scarcely be heard; They pass down the Valley like virgins, Too pure for the touch of a word.

Do you ask me the place of this Valley To hearts that are harrowed by care, It listh afar between mountains, And God and His angels are there; And one is the dark mount of sorrow, And one the bright mountain of prayer.

The Story.

The Secret Marriage.

To say that Harvey Frothingham was in had temper was to put the mildest form of words to express the savage mood in which he found himself one winter's evening, as he shot through the main street of the town of L-, on his way homeward. Everything had gone contrary to his wishes all with Josephine Ormand, whose pretty face was her only fortune, and who worked in a paper-box factory for her daily bread. Entirely ignorant of the fact that Harvey Frothingham was a man of standing and wealth in I .--, pretty Josie allowed the minor facts, that he was insultingly free in his addresses, to influence her so strongly thin her dignified reserve taught him the lesson he needed, and when he sought her for his wife she refused the honor. "As if, by Jove!" the angry man meditated, "I was only a hod-carrier."

To add to this discomfiture, the heirest Miss Maude Chesterton-whom he had held in reserve, that his ambition might win a wife if his love would not-had coolly informed him that she was engaged to Fred quently than it suited Harvey he should.

In society, Fred's handsome face, ready vit, courteous manners, and frank, sunny emper, kept him ever in higher favor than Harvey Frothingham's sullen, cold disposition could gain. Aud now, when Maude had been ever gracious to the son of the wealthy banker, Silas Frothingham, she answered his love-suit by the tidings that his life-long rival had won her promise to be his bride. "And the worst of it is, it will be just the natch to suit his uncle," mattered Harvey, savagely. "No fear of him disinheriting

"Thank you, I have only a few steps to go," answered Josie, hurrying forward ner-"You need not be afraid of me," Harvey said, noting her nervous manner. "I will not annoy you. Why will you not believe my respect is as great for you as my love?" And before he knew exactly where his words were leading him, the young man was renewing the offer he had made before. At the door of a small lodging house Josie stopped and faced him.

"You have spoken so before, Mr. Froth ingham, she said. gently; "and because I believe you are sincere I will tell you what I have kept secret for six months. I am already married. "Josie! Be quick! Why do you stand pointment to think of the hold he had upon his rival. Engaged to Maude Chesterton and married to Josie Ormund! Fancy the proud face when she knew she had been deceived for a girl who worked in a factory And sweeter still was it to Harvey Forthingham to think of the wrath of James Rutherford when the news reached him

But in his triumph, Harvey Frothingham had resolved to be very cautious, to have strong proof of his rival's marriage before venturing to accuse, to either his uncle or his betrothed. He had noticed the number of the house in the glare of the street-lamp: "No. 28 Ralph street."

This was the entry he made in his note book, in case his memory proved treach-It seemed as if fortune favored his plans. Only the next day, happening to get into large fruit-and-flour-shop, he saw Fred Holman selecting the contents of a large fancy basket of choicest truits and rarest Nodding carelessly to Harvey, he wrote the address upon a card, and attached it to the pretty basket.

"You will send this at once." he said. and then left the shop. And Harvey, taking the place Fred had just vacated, read the card Mrs. F. Holman, No. 28 Ralph street. What proof was needed now? It was ot in the nature of Harvey Frothir to work openly in any scheme. A blow in the dark suited him better. Feeling sure of his position now, he hurried homeward to write two anonymous letters, that would, he fondly hoped, disinherit and utterly confound his long successful rival. One of these venomous missives found Mande Chesterton in her pretty boudoir trifling with some embruidery, and dream ing sweet dreams of her love and Fred Holman's sweet devotion. She was a handsome, dignified girl of nineteen, full of all womanly sweetness, unspoiled by her great wealth.

She loved Fred Holman with the whole strength of her young heart, and she was sure that her love was returned. With the divine intuition of true love she knew that if she were beggared or deformed Fred would love her still the same. Not for money had he sought her for his wife, not even to please his uncle. He loved progressed but slowly, as Maude lay back in her deep arm-chair, looking into the glowing fire, and building castles of future happiness. From this tender reverie she was roused by a servant, who handed her a squarelyfolded letter, awkwardly addressed, and fastened with a water.

Wondering who her unknown correspondent could be, she opened the paper. The same straggling hand inside met her eyes. Only a few lines were written : "If you would have a proof of the falsehood of one you believe true, go at eight o'clock this evening to the second floor of No. 28 Ralph street, and you will find Mr.

Frederick Holman and his wife!" "Anonymous!" the proud girl said, ips curling and her eyes flashing. "It is

She threw the note upon the coals as poke, and watched the flames curl and blacken the paper till it flashed out of sight up the chimney. Then, with all the color stricken from her face, she took up her ambroidery. Had Harvey watched ber then, he would have thought that that poisoned arrow had

But it was not so. The work was thrown side, the piano rang out under the restless ingers, a novel was opened, a room was not in order; but while the calm face betrayed no secret suffering, the girl was tortured all day by the words of the anonymous note:

Frederick Holman and his wife! Could it be? Had the frank, brown eyes that had looked so lovingly into hers, mirrored only a false heart? Was she, indeed. so far deceived? Long before eight o'clock Maude Chester-on resolved to prove or falsify the words hat seemed burned upon her brain Surely, of all the world she had the best right to test the truth of such a monstrous charge against her betrothed lover.

And while she was striving to hide any eyes the tortures she endured, James lutherford was storming up and down his library, holding the second of Harvey Frothingham's communications in his hand. In the same awkward handwriting, the same facts were stated, the same hour and place to varify the writer's words. But the peppery old bachelor made no

The husband of a year has no business to stay away from
